

Lboro UCU Teach Outs

Unions and the Media

An online teach-out: Wednesday February 22nd, 2:30-5pm

We will start with a Trade Unions 101 by Anthony Kevins: Is a trade union like a student union? Are strikes just protests? And why are strikes even a thing? In this brief introduction to trade unions, we'll cover everything you ever wanted to know about collective bargaining but were too afraid to ask. Bring your questions! Then John Downey will present a talk entitled 'What about the workers? How do news media frame unions and what we can do about it' discussing unions, inequality, and media representation, including reflections on how UCU does self-mediation and how it is being represented in the current dispute.

Organising and Power

An online teach-out: Wednesday 1st March, 2:30-5pm

Ruth Kinna will give a talk (open to all staff and students) about Rose Pesotta (1896–1965), anarchist, feminist and labour organizer in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, then Alexandre Christoyannopoulos will lead a workshop (for LUCU members only) introducing methods from the Organizing for Power workshops that some members attended last year, with time for discussion about how they could work within Loughborough UCU.

Memories of Anti-racism

A hybrid teach-out: Thursday 16th March, 11am-12 noon, in-person and online

Emily Keightley will introduce the Migrant Memory and Postcolonial Imagination exhibition at Charnwood Arts (address: 27 Rectory PI, Loughborough LE11 1UW), and will talk about histories and memories of anti-racist protest and experiences of racism in Loughborough and East London.

Scan the QR codes to see:

All the latest
Lboro UCU News

Links to join the
Teach Outs

